Testimony Is a

One-Way Ticket Before McCarthy

After several days of listening to the direct broadcasts of the Senate committee hearing on the dispute between Senator McCarthy and the Army it may have occurred to you that while the Army's witnesses are being constantly reminded that they are testifying under oath and are subject to prosecution for perjury the Senators are immune and liable for nothing at all.

The idea that the individual American citizen is Mr. Big—not his office holder—seems to have shrunk noticeably since Joe McCarthy started shouting down the civil rights of mankind.

It should remind you that among the early English and early Americans a citizen was scarcely considered to be a man until he had served a term in jail for protesting against the tyranny of the swelled heads of government.

And a conscientious citizen will be further reminded that this integration of democratic government didn't begin under Joe McCarthy—it started back in the early F. D. Roosevelt administrations. It was then that the people showed such cowardice and lack of confidence in their country and themselves that they started signing away the power and independence of individual citizen to whatever crop of jaybirds happened to be roosting in the national capital.

This grant of power was so vast that no one President and no one Congress could possibly administer it, and so most of the power was delegated to administrators and clerks—and there were some mistakes.

Now comes Joe McCarthy stalking across the national stage with his big voice and his ugly threat of a Fascist state.

He would not be there but for the cowardice and error of common men in the recent past.

And whatever his intent, the fact remains that two wrongs don't make a right—what America has to do today is fight to confine government within its ancient constitutional limits and confirm the original rights of private citizens as freemen of this republic.

Filing Deadline Brings Few New Developments

The ticket for the July and August Democratic Primary elections closed at noon Wednesday with no startling developments and with opposition in practically every race.

The latest to file was A. P. Deloney for the Post Alderman of Ward 3 against incumbent B. L. Rettig who is seeking a second term.

Mrs. Charles Reynerson failed to draw opposition for city recorder as did Assessor C. Stuart, Circuit Clerk Garrett Willis, County Judge U. C. Garrett, Circuit Judge Lyle Brown, the last five seeking second terms. Representative Talbot Field Jr. also failed to draw an opponent as did Coroner Rufus Herndon, Jr.

Qualifying were:

Sheriff: Syville Burke, Tom Middlebrooks, W. B. Ruggles, Jimmy Cook and Son Phillips.

County Clerk: Jolly Amonette Byers, Arthur Anderson and Arnold J. Middlebrooks.

County Treasurer: Dwight Ridgill, Harry Hawthorne, Clifford Byers.

City Attorney: W. S. Atkins, C. V. Nunn, Jr.

Alderman Ward 1: Joe Jones, Mrs. Cathryn Lou Franks.

Alderman Ward 2: Forrest Hairr, T. O. Porter, John Greene.

Hope high school bands, both junior and senior, won high praise for their work at the State band festival, held last Thursday and Friday at Hot Springs.

The judges' criticism sheets, which arrived today had many compliments for both bands, according to Mr. Cannon, local band director.

"This year's Hope bands," said Mr. Cannon, "are equal in quality to any I have had in my seventeen years of teaching in Hope. I knew they played well at Hot Springs and the arrival of the criticism sheets from the judges only bore out my convictions."

There were seventy nine bands that participated in the state festival. The two Hope bands played on Thursday and Friday afternoons and marched Thursday night.

Accompanied by six chaperones, they traveled in three Missouri Pacific buses and stayed at the Waukesha hotel. The group totaled one hundred twenty eight people.

Quoting from one judge, "This is an improved band all the way through. True, there are minor discrepancies in tuning, occasional lapses in rhythmic attacks, etc., all minor failings, none of them marring the enjoyment of the whole. And again."

"By and large, the band plays so well that the minor indiscretions noted above are noticeable only to the highly critical ear. From another judge, good technique in all sections—clarinet's tones very sonorous—fine flute section. Lower read voices good."

The next performance by either band will be in the city-wide music festival, held in Hammons Stadium May 4th.

Hope CAP Tops in Arkansas in Flying Hours

In the April issue of Wing High-Lite, the state Civil Air Patrol publication, a list of the hours flown in March by each squadron in the state was published.

Hope's squadron headed that list with a total of 40 hours flown in the on-loan USA Liaison Plane assigned to this squadron. Hot Springs came next with 35 hours, Jacksonville 29, Fayetteville 22, Crossett 21, and Little Rock 20.

1st Lt. T. J. Barber, Squadron Commander, made the announcement today that our local unit has just received an L-10 Liaison Plane in place of the L-4 which the squadron received just after it organized some 90 days ago. Lt. Barber expressed the desire that more of the pilots within the squadron would fly the L-10 as much as possible.

The Liaison Plane is on-loan from the US Air Force, and the more it is utilized, the better the Air Force likes it. Hope has some 18 or 20 rated pilots in its Civil Air Patrol Squadron.

Sheriff: Syville Burke, Tom Middlebrooks, W. B. Ruggles, Jimmy Cook and Son Phillips.

Governor's Race Attracts Five, Four for Senate

From Our Wire Services

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A five-man governors race and a four-way campaign for the United States Senate shaped up today at the ticket-closing for the Arkansas Democratic primary election in July.

Orval Faubus, Huntsville newspaper publisher, State Sen. Guy Jones of Conway and Helena businessman Paul Chambers provided most of the drama during the tense hours before the filing deadline.

Faubus and Jones filed for the governorship along with J. M. Myers of Springdale, a political unknown. Chambers filed his candidacy for the United States Senate against Sen. John L. McClellan and former Gov. Sid McMath.

The filing of Faubus was the biggest surprise since the Huntsville man previously had announced he was withdrawing from consideration. He became fifth and final opponent for Gov. Francis Cherry, who is seeking a second term.

Faubus filed only five minutes before the deadline.

In explaining his action, Faubus pointed out that when he made his withdrawal announcement, he had said that "I might change my mind."

"I do not think the people of Arkansas want to leave this race in the hands of a half dozen so-called governor makers," Faubus said.

Faubus is former state highway director, former member of the

10 Small Tornadoes Rip 3 States

By United Press

A cold front sweeping the country on broad arc from New York state to Texas was blamed today for 10 tornadoes.

Five of the tornadoes struck last night in Oklahoma, four in Texas and one in Ohio. Damage was relatively light and only one casualty reported.

The cold front brought chilly temperatures to the entire Mississippi Valley and sent thunderstorms ranging along the Atlantic Coast.

The mercury dropped into the low twenties at most towns in northern Montana and the community of Cutbank reported 17 degrees. Four inches of new snow fell in Yellowstone Park.

A series of storm centers in the Western plateau spread rain from Southern California to Salt Lake City and northward to Portland, Ore. Some California points had an inch of rain.

"A baby tornado" ripped through Adena, O., last night, leaving a narrow trail of wreckage through the town of 1,700. One man suffered a scalp injury as he crawled from his wrecked apartment.

Other twisters were reported at Sulphur and Hobart in Oklahoma and three funnels were sighted near Chickasha, Okla.

One tornado touched earth to the east of Big Spring, Tex., and another to the north.

Rochester, Tex., suffered the heaviest damage from the evening's storms with several buildings unroofed including a farm equipment warehouse and two barracks used to house Mexican workers.

The Texas community of Balinger had a narrow escape when a funnel bounced off the earth at the north side of town, skipped over most of the city, and then hit again at the south edge. It took the roofs off five houses.

The new twisters brought the nation's two-day total to 17. Four were counted Monday night in Iowa and three in Oklahoma.

Last night was the second evening in a row in which twisters were sighted near Chickasha and Hobart, Okla.

Two pilots were forced to parachute from their T-33 Air Force jet plane near Clinton, Okla., during a violent thunderstorm last night. One landed safely but the other was still missing.

Another Try to Save Jenkins

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A fourth last-minute effort to save the life of slayer Bill Jenkins will be made in Federal District Court here today.

Execution of Jenkins' death sentence has been postponed three times previously by Gov. Cherry. Jenkins is scheduled to die in the electric chair at Tucker Prison Farm Friday.

Frightened Little Girl of 9 Wants to Stay With Mother Who Tortured, Deformed Her

NORWALK, Calif. (UP)—Doctors fought to try to restore the deformed body of nine-year-old Celia Sanchez who said she still loved her mother despite 18-months of torture in which the mother:

"Twisted her arms until they broke a" with a crunching noise."

Struck her so hard in the face she was blinded in one eye.

Beat her back into a mass of welts with a rubber hose.

Knocked out six of the girl's upper teeth.

Squeezed her hands until the bones broke.

Smashed the girl's nose by breaking several times with the knee and her fists.

Sheriff's deputies, acting on a tip, seized Mrs. Trinidad Vera, 28, and found Celia covering behind a pile of dirty clothes in Mrs. Vera's home.

Mrs. Vera has seven children, including Celia, and is expecting her eighth.

Celia broke into tears when the officers said they were taking her from her mother.

"I love my mother," she sobbed.

Deputies said Mrs. Vera admitted that she savagely and systematically beat the girl during the past 18 months.

Mrs. Vera was arrested after a neighbor reported that Celia was

SW Gas Wants to Issue Bonds

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Southwestern Gas & Electric Co. of Shreveport, La., today asked the Arkansas Public Service Commission for authority to issue $10 million in bonds.

Southwestern said it would use the money to help finance a proposed $21,600 construction program. The company operates in Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas.

Avalanche Threatens Panama Canal

BALBOA, Canal Zone (UP)—Men and machines worked feverishly today in steaming jungle against an ever-increasing threat of an avalanche that could block the vital Panama Canal.

The danger stemmed from a 600-foot deep crack in Contractors Hill overlooking the canal in the famed Gallard cut. Officials said the hill could slide into the waterway at any time and that the start of the rainy season intensified the danger.

Maintenance crews working around the clock were cutting off the top of the hill on the "land slide" in an attempt to relieve the pressure.

Canal engineers apparently hoped that by doing so, the slide, if it comes, would fall harmlessly into the jungle.

Blocking of the canal would force shipping between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans to "detour" through the Straits of Magellan at the southernmost tip of South Africa.

A dredge was put on double-shift duty in the canal and two high cranes have been placed on both sides of the hill on stand-by bases.

The crash was first spotted several years ago, but it was so narrow it was possible to step across it. Recently however, it began widening at a alarming rate.

Easy Life of Schine in Army Is Described

By RAYMOND LAHR and HERBERT FOSTER WASHINGTON (UP)—The McCarthy hearings were full of new controversy and testimony that Pvt. David Schine, escaped KP duty, was a draftee at Fort Monmouth, N. J.

Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy tried in vain to block the money on the grounds that it was completely unfair to the Army without Schine being sent to answer Democratic charges that McCarthy himself in the past made charges against persons who weren't able to answer them.

Schine will be called later until he was drafted, he was sent to McCarthy's investigation committee.

McCarthy created another light of the hearing when Secretary of the Army Robert Stevens said "some one has or will be guilty of perjury in these hearings."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D) had previously reminded that all witnesses are testifying under oath and that direct questions in their stories might lead to some one being prosecuted for perjury.

The picture of Schine at Fort Dix last fall was in a series of questions by Stevens by Ray H. Jenkins (Lib) counsel of the Senate investigating subcommittee. Jenkins based the questions on a report made by the Inspector General.

Stevens testified in reply to Jenkins that he was not a perjury.

"I am taking this opportunity to announce to you my candidacy for alderman in Ward Two, Hope. I am 38 years old, married and reside at 902 S. Hamilton Street. I have lived in Hope for the past 14 years.

"I was born in Nevada County 12 miles south just across the Hempstead line and attended Bodewad school. I have worked for the public as an auto mechanic since moving to Hope. For the past four years I have operated a business of my own and think that I am qualified to serve you in the position I seek to fill.

"If elected, I promise to work for the betterment of our city as this is the largest business we have in Hope. I think it should be run in a business way.

"I earnestly solicit your vote and influence in the coming primaries."

The problem of weeds and on lots owned by out-of-state residents posed an issue without little solution. Mayor Sparks promised a complete cleanup of the city and asked the owners of old lots to clean up by the end of the year.

A good part of the discussion devoted to open lots which have been a sore spot in these areas for many years. Many are not in use, they are a health menace and owners will be turned in by city officials and steps will be taken to have them filled.

Redleg Hitters Need Homers to Stay Ahead

By CARL LUNDQUIST
United Press Sports Writer

Cincinnati's sluggers are hitting homers at a record pace — and they had better keep swinging if they want to stay in first place because their pitchers are giving — at the same time Cincinnati's "Birdie Tebbetts" bombers were on top in the National League to day on the strength of their 8-1 victory last night over the Pirates but it was of little comfort to him because of the way those lowly Pittsburghers were smashing circuit drives.

Here are some of the vital statistics that keep Tebbetts awake at night:

Cincinnati hitters have blasted 15 homers in 12 games whereas at this time last year when Cincinnati was all-time club record of 100, the Reds had only eight. Very fine but — at the same time Cincinnati pitchers have yielded 26 homers.

The club's chief "gopher ball" victim, Rookie Corky Valentine was tagged for four last night. (Two each by Rookie Jerry Lynch and Catcher Toby Atwell.)

That's why Tebbetts was glad that earlier in the game, Ted Kluszewski hit two Cincinnati homers and Jim Greengrass got one to give Valentine a 5-0 lead before the Bucs began making "come" out of him. Valentine has yielded seven homers, Fred Buzewski five, Bud Peblenian four, Joe Nuxhall three, Art Fowler two, Harry Perkowsky two, Ken Reifersberger, Howie Judson and departed George Zvernick one each.

The Cardinals, paced by Ray Jablonski who drove in three runs on a double and single, defeated the Dodgers, 7-5, and knocked them out of the lead, while at Milwaukee, the Braves topped the Giants, 3-2, as Johnny Logan singled home the winning run in the eighth. In the only American League game, the White Sox improved their first place margin by defeating the Yankees, 4-3, on the margin of Minnie Minoso's two-run homer.

Cleveland at Boston, Baltimore at Washington and Detroit at Philadelphia were rained out in the American while Philadelphia at Chicago was postponed in the National.

Lefty Preacher Roe, who had a lifetime 27-13 won and lost record against the Cardinals and who beat them three times last year, was tapped for six hits and five runs before being removed in the fifth, victim of his second straight defeat.

Lefty Al Brazle and soft-stuff right-hander Stu Miller collaborated to pitch hitless ball after Gerry Staley was batted out in the fifth, saving the veteran's second victory.

The runs in the fourth inning off starter Larry Jansen ending a string of scoreless innings by Giant pitchers at 32. The Giants tied the score with single runs in the sixth and eighth, then Logan came through with his game-winning hit after Ed Mathews walked, stole second and rookie Hank Aaron singled. The Braves had no putouts in the outfield, tying a major league mark.

Yankee Don Johnson, with relief help from Al Sima and Sam Cosentino, gained credit for the White Sox victory, his first. Minoso homered after Al Carrasquel singled in the fifth for the two big runs which offset a Yankee tally in the ninth.

DOGS
By Tom Farley

The Happy Dog
Dogs differ from all other animals in one basic way. While almost any animal can be a pet, the dog is the only animal that instinctively seeks out man and values his affection above all else.

A horse, for instance, never forms the same close attachment to his owner that he does to another of his own kind. There are many instances of a horse going off his feed when separated from his stable mate. But whoever heard of a horse getting worried because his owner disappeared? Yet there are thousands of cases of dogs going to skin and bones in only a few days under similar circumstances.

It is of course this trait of devotion to humans that makes the dog the most popular pet and the easiest of all animals to train. For a dog wants nothing in the world so much as to please a human being.

It is almost axiomatic that the best trained dog is the happiest dog — contrary to the belief of many who know little about dogs. The more things a dog is taught, the more opportunities he has to win praise, which is the one thing he wants. And no dog can be taught very much without the lavish use of praise.

The dog that is under complete control — that sits, heels, comes, stays, down, and stays, knows how to please his master. He has been praised hundreds of times for so performing during his training period and it makes him happy to do the things that he knows he has been praised for.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Emmett M. Eslinger, former labor leader here, was found dead today in his car, his head crushed and his throat slashed.

The 51-year-old Eslinger, who once Teamsters' local, was found slumped in the front seat of his car, parked on the shoulder of a road on 87th street, a block east of U.S. 71.

Police and sheriff's officers said Eslinger had been driving north on 87th street when he was killed. He was wearing a dark suit and a light-colored shirt.

The body was found by Eslinger's wife, who began checking on him when he failed to return home after work. She called the police and the sheriff's office.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be possible now for the nation's boxing fans to settle back and start working up a fever over the heavyweight championship bet between Rocky Marciano and Ezzard Charles on June 17 without having to worry about whether their latest heart throb, Hurricane Jack, is being done out of his rights.

Jimmy Slade, the happy character from Harlem attended to that when he punched the latest television hero full of holes here the other night. It was reminiscent of the job Kid Gavilan did on Chuck Davey at the time the collegian was on the point of being declared the world champion welterweight by popular acclaim.

Jackson, like Davey before him, had looked unbeatable and positively lethal as he disposed of such name heavyweights as Clarence Henry, Rex Layne and Dan Baccenari in startling succession before national audiences. The 22-year-old semi-novice from Long Island had almost overnight been acclaimed the country's No. 3 fighting man.

It was easy to believe too, watching the relentless, tireless young Negro batter down his seasoned opponents. Even the professionals, such as Jack Dempsey, became excited over Hurricane. Even some of them thought he might already be the destroyer that Joe Louis was at his age so it was small wonder that the parlor and barroom experts were infected.

The story now goes that the promoter at Eastern Parkway, Teddy Brenner, who had "made the Hurricane" with his nationally televised shows, and a strong hunch that Slade, though only a blown-up tight heavyweight, could employ his unorthodox style to make the "phenom" look like a monkey.

Jackson's managers, it seems, had notified Brenner that they were quitting him to go big time and fight Charley Norkus for the International Boxing Club in the Garden May 28. In view of this larger opportunity, they suggested that Brenner tear up a contract they had signed, before their tiger stopped Bucceroni, for a subsequent meeting with Slade.

As Brenner had dropped a bundle on the Bucceroni bout through having guaranteed Bucceroni $10,000, the promoter said no. He wanted a chance to get his money back and he knew Jackson would fill his hall. Also, he has his aforementioned hunch, even though the odds makers thought he was dead wrong, 13 to 5.

So the Hurricane was forced to go through with what looked like only necessary chore and he doesn't know yet where all those punches came from. He looked perplexed at times as though he suspected his smaller tormentor of using four gloves. At any rate, it made for a highly entertaining evening, and both Marciano and Charles can relax for a while.

A House Big Enough

By Gudrun Olson
Copyright 1954 by Gudrun Olson

THE STORY: Lenny Dahlstrom, a young man who has not won the love of his mother-in-law, with Lenny and her young husband have lived since their marriage is determined to break through the barriers that seem to separate them. But almost everything Lenny does seems to end in a disaster or a mishap.

A chuckling sound, the first real Elaine had heard from Mrs. Dahlstrom, made Elaine turn her head. "That horse!" She laughed and looked back in her throat. "How could she do that?"

"Gee, she still does," Elaine replied, smiling. "Nevertheless, she took a lot of sugar from me before he jerked away." She watched Mrs. Dahlstrom and when the latter look did not reappear immediately a warm sensation began to flow inside the young woman.

Then Mrs. Dahlstrom stopped smiling. Her dark eyebrows raised and she said, "You didn't go near that horse, did you?"

"Yes, I thought the might be friendly."

"Well, he won't be," Mrs. Dahlstrom warned.

Elaine's blood seemed to turn ice in her veins as the notion flashed through her mind that Mrs. Dahlstrom meant that she wouldn't be friendly either. Rubbing her hands together, first, she picked up a chocolate doughnut and then a slice of hot fat.

"I don't know," she thought she would say or do anything that would make this woman. A chilly rivulet of perspiration began to trickle down her spine. Was Mrs. Dahlstrom working to destroy Tom's love for her, just like she was destroying Elaine's self-esteem?

The question bit at her with the open fangs of a snake and Elaine could feel the strange poison of hatred begin to seep through her veins.

Which at last the final doughnut was cooling on brown paper, a too-perverse sense of obligation Elaine was powerless to deny, prompted her to ask, "Is there anything else I can do for you?"

"No, thank you," Mrs. Dahlstrom said roughly. Elaine could not feel the effort she had to make to control her voice. "You've done enough already."

Again, Elaine sensed a double meaning. Elaine had taken Tom's hand weak with discouragement, and to a stairs and unpack them.

Elaine said, wondering if Mrs. Dahlstrom noted the tremor in her voice. She escaped the kitchen.

Mrs. Dahlstrom's enigmatical eyes seemed to follow her through the house and up the stairs.

Swinging her heavy suitcase up to the window seat, she opened the door and went to the window. The window glass when she glanced out showed a long wire of pain.

Tom's tractor was parked at the end of the east field. Near the other side of the fence, a small horse. Even at this distance, Elaine could see how the horse's sleek hide.

Elaine's hair that billowed around the shoulders of his rider. Elaine's breath seemed to congeal around the horse's head.

Butterfly she wondered what Tom and Astrid were talking about. Or perhaps Astrid was doing all the talking, hypnotizing Tom with her charming wit and tinkling laughter. An eternity dragged by before the sorrel horse wheeled around and the trees guarding a secret trail through the forest hid him and Astrid from view. Tom's tractor moved slowly across the field.

The spot where Astrid had vanished seemed to besmudge the whole length of the autumn-hued forest. For a long time Elaine kept her eyes on it, while the leaden weight of helplessness settled around her. Automatically, she started to close the suitcase. Why hadn't she left today?

Her spirit was dead as a stump in the hill. As Mrs. Dahlstrom said it was better to live down a mistake than to try to live with it.

The snap of the suitcase clasps was like a bomb-burst in the quiet room. Inexplicably, exasperation, like steam from a geyser, began to spurt through Elaine. Opening the suitcase again, she yanked out the carefully packed dresses, which came tumbling through the air, scattering tissue on the floor, jerked open the closet door and hung them.

Why must she always sell her things short? What was the matter with her anyway? Tom loved her. He said so. Period. He had said his mother was well. Period. He had said nothing about Astrid. It was up to her to find out whether Astrid was important to him or not. No sensible woman would make an issue of a neighborly chat over the back fence, whether that fence was a 100-foot by 10 lot or a 20-acre farm.

Elaine began to merge with her surroundings as she arranged the dresses in the closet. Some of the dresses were new, some were old-fashioned undergarments. She pulled down the lower rack in the closet and the laundry sack came crashing down behind her. Elaine gasped when she saw the contents.

She could see the washing machine and the dryer. The dryer was a new one, and the washing machine was a new one.

Although she couldn't see Tom's face, she could see his hands. They were working on the dryer.

Elaine's heart was pounding. She was so happy. She was so happy.

Russia Replies to Atom Pool Proposals

GENEVA (AP) Soviet Russia replied today to American proposals on President Eisenhower's plan for an atomic pool for peaceful purposes.

The content of the Soviet reply was not disclosed, but informed sources indicated that no important progress had been made in the exchange.

The note was handed to U. S. Secretary of State Dulles by Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov in a half-hour conference at which the two statesmen also discussed problems related to the current Geneva conference on Far Eastern issues.

Dulles had submitted the American proposals to Soviet Ambassador Georgi Zarubin in Washington March 19. Their nature was not disclosed.

U. S. officials said, however, the proposals dealt with concrete recommendations as contrasted with procedural questions taken up in earlier talks in Washington and Moscow.

A joint British-American communiqué issued in London after Dulles' visit there two weeks ago said Dulles and British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden had reviewed the atomic question and discussed the latest U. S. proposals.

The whole exchange grew out of President Eisenhower's speech before the United Nations General Assembly last Dec. 8 suggesting that the powers producing atomic energy might pool some quantities to be developed for peaceful uses.

This was considered as a possible opening wedge to break the long deadlock on atomic energy control.

Malenkov Says Russia Has A-Bombs Set

MOSCOW (UP) — Premier Georgi Malenkov said today that if the West should attack Russia with atom bombs "the aggressor would be crushed by the same weapon."

In a speech before one chamber of the Supreme Soviet, Malenkov warned:

"If the aggressive circles, banking on the atomic weapon, should resort to madness and should want to test the strength and might of the Soviet Union, the aggressor would be crushed by the same weapon and such an adventure would inevitably lead to the ruin of the capitalist social system."

His remarks were met with thunderous cheers from the Soviet deputies.

The Soviet premier tempered his warning to possible aggressors with a restatement of Russia's desire to join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), under certain circumstances, and said Russia wants to cooperate with all nations.
